Subject: Naming of Classroom for Professor Emerita Dina Stallings

Background: Professor Emerita Dina Stallings taught English classes at Riverside Community College from 1961 until her retirement in 1986. She was founding director and teacher-coach of the award winning RCC Forensics and Debate program and was founder and teacher/coach of the Children’s Literature program. Background: Back in March, 2001, the College was notified by Miné Okubo’s estate that it was named a beneficiary of the estate for various works of art and papers. Since that time, the District has worked closely with Miné’s niece, Seiko Buckingham, who is the executor for the estate. In order to close the estate, two things were required. First, an inventory of all her possessions, art work and papers, and second was settling all outstanding debts against the estate.

As there were no financial resources in the estate the Board of Trustees authorized $10,000.00 to ship her works to Riverside to be inventoried. The inventory has been completed, and in order for the Executor to distribute the estate, all outstanding debts need to be settled. As a primary beneficiary, the Board of Trustees is being asked to consider the $10,000.00 as payment to ship and preserve the collection that will be coming to the District. All creditors are being asked to forgive or reduce their outstanding debts for the same reason.

Recommended Action: It is recommended that the Board of Trustee consider the $10,000.00 spent in 2002 as payment to transport and preserve the Okubo collection that will be coming to the District.

SABBATICAL LEAVE REPORT 2005 – 2006

KRISTINE ANDERSON
Overview

As stated in my sabbatical leave proposal, the goal of my sabbatical was to pursue the following projects:

- to research, write, and submit articles to scholarly journals,
- to work on translations of poetry from Spanish to English, and
- to create an original manuscript of poetry to submit to book publishers.

All of the above tasks were addressed. In addition, unexpected opportunities presented themselves, all of which provided benefits to me, to my students, and/or to the college.

Accomplishments of the Sabbatical Leave

1.) My sabbatical request indicated that I would research Latin American women poets, in part because their work has long been obscure in the United States. Following research, I proposed writing two or more scholarly articles and submitting these articles for publication.

The following activities were accomplished:

- Research and writing of a scholarly article titled “Paying Attention to the World: Appreciating the Poetry of Latin American Women Writers” (manuscript copy attached). This manuscript was submitted to the Writer’s Chronicle, the official publication of the Association of Writers and Writing Programs. Although the editor wrote that reviewers “enjoyed reading it very much,” the article did not fit the publication’s needs at the time. Importantly, the editor invited me to submit other articles to this publication in the future. Ongoing: I will submit the article, “Paying Attention to the World,” to other publications for their consideration.

- Although not specifically a part of this sabbatical request, I wrote and published a review of a book on the craft of writing poetry that was written by the current United States poet laureate, Ted Kooser. My review of Kooser’s The Poetry Home Repair Manual, titled “Who We Are, What We Do,” can be found online at Dotlit: The Online Journal of Creative Writing 5.1 (March 2006). Dotlit is published by the Creative Writing and Cultural Studies discipline at Queensland University of Technology, Brisbane. A copy of the article is attached and also can be found at http://www.dotlit.qut.edu.au/journal/reviews/index.php?jor_id=43.
I researched the work of contemporary Mexican poet Kyra Galván, using resources available through the University of California. I am grateful, too, for the help of RCC librarian Linda Sing in helping me secure texts by Ms. Galván. Much of the material I found about Ms. Galván’s work is, of course, written in Spanish. Although Galván’s work is well known in her native Mexico, not much formal criticism has been written. Of this small amount, the least has been written about Ms. Galván’s most recent collection (Netzahualcóyotl recorre las islas, 1996). This is the collection on which my reading and study have focused. Ongoing: In the process of reading Ms. Galván’s work and criticism of it, I realized that I would not be ready to complete my critical analysis until I had produced translations of all, or at least most, of the poems in her most recent book. I have found no English translations of these poems. Because translation is a time-consuming, detailed process, the article remains a work in progress. (See below for further information on the translations.)

2.) Another part of my sabbatical involved translation. Tasks included looking for texts of Latin American women poets not yet translated into English, working closely with the work of one or two particular poets. I planned to produce Spanish-to-English translations of Latin American poems by selected writers. These translations would also be submitted for publication.

The following activities were accomplished:

- I have translated approximately fifteen poems from Mexican poet Kyra Galván’s 1996 book, Netzahualcóyotl recorre las islas, with others in process. (A selection of these translations is attached.) Although I originally planned to translate a much smaller number of poems (“two or more”), I’ve found myself in the process of translating all of the poems from this text; a collection that Ms. Galván confirmed for me has not yet been translated into English. Although I expected to translate poems by different writers, it soon became clear to me as I engaged in this process that I would do better work by concentrating on the work of one poet. A translator of poetry must make decisions about word order, sounds, punctuation, and line length—including, in addition to grappling with issues of linguistic meaning and intent. Reading poetry in another language requires familiarity with the language as well as a strong sense of how to interpret a particular writer’s texts. Ultimately, the translated piece must function not only as a conveyer of a “message,” but also it must exist as a poem in its new language. Ongoing: I continue working on translations of poems from the collection Netzahualcóyotl recorre las islas.

- To secure permission to submit my translations for publication, I needed to locate the poet. It took eight months to obtain contact information for the poet Kyra Galván, whose work I was translating—an adventure that put me in contact with a number of award-winning poets, translators, educators, and publishers, all of whom were generous with their time and assistance. Among these were Mary Crow, translator and poet laureate of Colorado; Valerie Mejer, a Mexican poet and translator; Ellen Dore Watson, poet, translator, and director of the Poetry Center at Smith College; and C. M. Mayo, publisher, poet, and translator. Ms. Mayo was able to locate an e-mail address for the poet, which she forwarded to me. Kyra Galván was gracious and encouraging in her response. I had sent Ms. Galván two of my translations. In her response, she said she found the translations not only “correct” but also true to the form and spirit of her original poems in Spanish. She went on to say, “Se nota que están traducidas por alguien que escribe poesía... Gracias, son perfectas!” (“One can tell that they are translated by someone who writes poetry . . . . Thank you, they are perfect!”) I was delighted.

While participating in the Association of Writers and Writing Programs conference in March 2006, I attended presentations on translation and on publishing translated work. At that time, I learned that I need not only the poet’s permission, but—in many cases (Ms. Galván’s text being one) - also the original publisher’s permission, before I can submit English translations for publication. This poses a challenge, as I had already sent an e-mail to the editor at the press of the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (which published Netzahualcóyotl recorre las islas) in October 2005 and had received no reply. (I am grateful for the assistance of RCC Spanish professor Kathy Kelly, who was kind enough to look over my Spanish-language e-mail draft for issues of appropriate format and formality before I sent the correspondence.) Ongoing: In October 2006, I plan to attend the annual American Literary Translators Association conference. There I will be able to obtain more information and direction toward securing necessary rights in order to submit translations for publication in the United States.

3.) The third project of my sabbatical was to create a manuscript of original poetry to submit for publication. This project involved research, writing, revision, and compiling a series of poems. Individual poems were submitted for publication in literary journals, and the entire manuscript was submitted to poetry-book publishers.

During the year while I was researching, composing, and honing poetry for the collection, I attended numerous workshops and conferences. These are as follows:
- Tomales Bay Workshops (University of California, Davis, Creative Writing Program), October 19-24, 2005; Tomales Bay, California. I received a Tomales Bay Fellowship in poetry, a full fellowship for attendance based on original poetry submitted (see information on fellowships below).
- Poetry workshop with Mark Doty (audited), presented by Tebot Bach, a nonprofit organization in Orange County; February 4, 2006.
- Association of Writers and Writing Programs Conference, Austin, Texas, March 8-11, 2006. I am grateful for the support of the Riverside School for the Arts, which allowed me to attend this conference.
- Fishtrap Summer Writing Workshops, Wallowa Lake, Oregon, July 9-16, 2006. I received a Fishtrap Fellowship, a full fellowship for attendance, based upon original poetry submitted; Luis Urrea was the final judge (see information on fellowships below).

- A full-length manuscript of poetry (56 pages), titled Close Enough, is completed and in process of submission to poetry publishers/contests. (A selection of poems from the manuscript is attached.) Those familiar with poetry publication have warned me that the process of finding a publisher can easily take two years. Unlike the publication of novels, most first books of poetry are published as the result of winning contests. To date, the manuscript has been submitted to Sarabande Books: The Kathryn A. Morton Prize in Poetry, Ausable Press, and Northeastern University: Samuel French Morse Poetry Prize, with a smaller selection submitted to the Poetry Society of America’s National Chapbook Fellowship. One of these submissions, to Northeastern University, remains active. Ongoing: The manuscript will be sent to a number of publishers who are accepting submissions this fall and winter.

- Packets of three to five poems each have been submitted to literary journals, including the following currently active submissions: Boulevard magazine (Richmond Heights, Missouri); Cider Press Review (Halifax, Pennsylvania); Cream City Review (University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee); the Hudson Review (New York, New York); poeticdiversity (online magazine, Los Angeles); Rattle (Studio City, California); and Rhino (Evanston, Illinois). In addition, a poetry submission to Oneiros Press Broadside Contest (Millikin University) remains active. Ongoing: I continue to submit groups of poems to various literary journals, especially to journals that have encouraged me to send new work during the next reading period. Among these are Ellipsis (Westminster College) and Puerto del Sol (New Mexico State University).

- A poem titled “On My Father’s Birthday” will be published in the forthcoming Fishtrap Anthology.

- Public readings, also a form of “publication” (that is, “making public”), became an unanticipated opportunity during the year. I was fortunate to be featured at a number of public poetry readings during the year:
  - Tomales Bay Workshops, October 20, 2006; featured as a fellowship winner in poetry (see below)
  - Beyond Baroque, Venice, California; March 5, 2006 (read with poet Larry Colker)
  - The Neighborhood Cup, Aliso Viejo, California; May 9, 2006
  - Open Door Books, San Diego, California; June 11, 2006 (read with poet Sarah Maclay)
  - Fishtrap Summer Writing Workshop, July 12, 2006; featured as a fellowship winner (see below)

Professional Value of the Sabbatical Leave
It is with great satisfaction and pride that I point to the articles, translations, and poems I produced during the sabbatical year, the fellowships, the readings, and other accomplishments. At the same time, equally important to the completed work is the work in which I am still engaged. The sabbatical time allowed me to deepen my critical and creative skills, and I intend to continue applying these skills to works in progress and to new work.

Furthermore, the sabbatical year provided many opportunities to meet established and highly regarded writers, teacher-writers, and translators. In some cases these interactions resulted in such intangible but valuable benefits as moral support and enthusiastic encouragement for my work. In other cases, I benefited from specific, more tangible effects, such as contact information obtained for the poet Kyra Galván, expert advice on submitting my book manuscript for publication, and invitations to feature at poetry readings.
District Benefits
The professional activities of the sabbatical enhanced my contribution to the District in a number of ways:

- Scholarly work and translations have kept me active in the broad community of academia. My work in the field of translation and study of Latin American poetry allow me to bring to the classroom and, by extension, to the district, some greater perspectives and knowledge of the world of contemporary literature, especially as this knowledge and understanding pertain to our hemisphere. In addition, these activities have enhanced my Spanish reading and writing fluency. Part of my responsibility as a college instructor in the twenty-first century is to bring a global perspective to the classroom, and these sabbatical activities have strengthened my ability to cross cultural and linguistic borders.

- Another benefit is my connections with other writer-educators as well as writer-translators—through workshops and conference attendance and other contacts established during my sabbatical. Not only have these contacts enhanced my professional development, but also they have encouraged me to re-establish RCC’s Literary Readings Series, with the support of the Riverside School for the Arts. This series of presentations by published writers brings to our students and to our community a deeper cultural awareness and academic exposure to contemporary literature. At this writing, I am in the process of finalizing classroom visits and a public reading by two award-winning southern California poets. Bringing these poets to the campus would have been much more difficult—if it had been possible at all—without the help of another fellowship winner whom I met at the Tomales Bay Workshops in October 2005.

- Critical and creative work have kept, and will continue to keep, me in tune with the processes of writing. English faculty at the community college primarily teach composition courses. Thus, it is important for me to be engaged in the writing process outside the classroom, so that I can bring “real world” experience to my teaching. As a writer-teacher, I strive to be one who “practices” what I “preach.” The sabbatical has allowed me to concentrate on the roles of “writer” and “scholar” for a while; now, I merge these roles again with full-time classroom instruction.

- As I have participated in writing workshops and conferences, poetry readings, and other activities of the sabbatical leave, I represent Riverside Community College by virtue of my place on the faculty here. Thus, these activities further support RCC’s reputation as an institution of practicing artists and academics.

Concluding Statement

The sabbatical allowed me the physical and mental time to accomplish significant professional goals: to research, write, and submit scholarly articles, translations of poetry from Spanish into English, and my original poems for publication. In fact, because of interesting developments along the way, some of my sabbatical accomplishments took a slightly different direction than originally planned. A number of unexpected opportunities arose. In the end, I produced more translations than expected; attended workshops and a conference which were not part of my original proposal; met and interacted with expert teachers, writers, and translators who provided valuable assistance and opened new opportunities to me; acquired new professional contacts that led to my participation in a panel presentation at the spring 2007 AWP conference as well as greater networking with literary organizations in the Inland Empire; and more.

Importantly, the work proposed for the sabbatical enhances my teaching as well as my professional contributions to the English discipline and to the college as a whole. Tangible results are even now emerging as plans develop for guest readers/speakers and other possible events.

If the committee has any questions or needs further information, please let me know. Thank you.

SABBATICAL LEAVE REPORT 2005 -2006

SHARON CRASNOW
REPORT ON SABBATICAL LEAVE 2005-2006
Sharon Crasnow, Associate Professor, Philosophy
Norco Campus

Introduction

Thank you to the Professional Development Committee and the Board of Trustees for having approved my 70% for the 2005-2006 academic year. This past year has indeed been one of the most productive of my professional life. I have explored new areas of research, forged new networks with those who work in my field, published several papers, and begun work on a book. All of these activities are linked to the goals that I had declared for my sabbatical. I return to the college refreshed and reconnected to my discipline. The following report is in several parts. In Part I, I offer a qualitative overview of the sabbatical. In Part II, I detail the extent to which I have accomplished the original goals set forth in the request. In Part III, I detail the benefits of the sabbatical leave to RCCD. In Part IV, I indicate future goals based on the work that I did during the sabbatical. Part V consists of copies of the work that I did, divided into two sections: a. published and forthcoming work; b. work under review for publication or peer-reviewed conference presentation.

I. OVERVIEW OF THE SABBATICAL.

Summer and Fall 2005: My sabbatical began in July 2005 with work on a chapter for a volume of the forthcoming Handbook for Philosophy of Science. These volumes are being published by Elsevier. My chapter is to appear in Volume 15, Handbook for Philosophy of Anthropology and Sociology. When I agreed to write this chapter (in 2004), I anticipated that the research involved would be incorporated into the book on objectivity that I have been planning. That book is to include examples from the social science. I had already sketched the theoretical portion of this chapter but needed to do research in feminist methodology in anthropology and sociology. I spent most of July gathering this work and most of August writing the chapter. The deadline was October 1. I was extremely fortunate in that my husband had been given research facilities at the Collegium in Budapest, Hungary. The Collegium very kindly offered me workspace and internet access. For two weeks I was able to work uninterrupted and have the experience of living in the beautiful city of Budapest. By September, I had a completed draft which went to the editors and I worked on corrections over the fall.

During the fall 2005, I continued doing research on anthropology and wrote an abstract and the first draft of a paper, which I submitted for the program of the Philosophy of Social Science Roundtable. The abstract was accepted for presentation at the conference in March 2006.

During the fall, I also taught and chaired the Program Review Committee. These activities were part of the 30% service that I owed the district. I organized my 30% teaching commitment so that I would have it completed prior to the spring and would be able to devote the entire spring to research.
Winter 2006: I was asked to contribute to a special issue of Science and Education and so began work on a paper for that volume. I revised the Handbook chapter and turned in the final page proofs. I taught one online course and participated in the Program Review training for the final cohort as part of my service to the college.

Spring 2006: This was the most productive period of my sabbatical. During this period I attended numerous conferences (see below), wrote several papers (2 of which will be published), revised the book outline, wrote a course outline, and created the Critical Thinking About Science webpage. I have detailed the written work below. Some of the unexpected ways in which the sabbatical revitalized my professional life are:

- Attending conferences I learned of new literature in epistemology. I read primarily in philosophy of science and so had fallen behind in this area. There are several areas that were particularly important for me to know about: contextualism, experimental philosophy, new theories of truth. I am better prepared to expose my students to current thinking in this area than I was prior to the sabbatical.
- I connected with philosophers in Southern California who are working in areas related to those in which I work: at UCLA, Sandra Harding (she read and commented on some of the work that I am having published); Georgia Warnke at UCR (she invited me to colloquia and introduced me to other UCR philosophy faculty—they are a good connection for our students); Bonnie Paller at CSUN; Laurie Shrage at Cal Poly Pomona (philosophy department—again a good connection for our students); Martha Lampland at UCSD (sociology and science studies). These connections are valuable for our students, for me professionally (I have been active in conference organization for the APA and for smaller groups in philosophy), and for RCC as they make the college visible in the local network of colleges and universities and nationally.
- These conferences also provided opportunities for more informal discussions about teaching philosophy, the nature of philosophy and its role in the liberal arts curriculum. I return to teaching with some great new ideas, resources, and suggestions.
- Interaction with publishers at conferences. I had one discussion in particular that could be promising. Pearson Publishing showed an interest in a critical thinking book that I am considering writing.

II. GOALS OF THE SABBATICAL LEAVE
(The original goals from the sabbatical request appear below in italics.)

My goals are:
- To create a prospectus and three chapters of the book on objectivity for presentation to publishers.

I have not yet sent a prospectus to potential publishers. I have attached my revised outline and the rough of three of the chapters. These three chapters are largely based on the papers referred to below, but are not identical to any of them. I estimate the book is about one quarter complete. I anticipate that it will require at least another two years of work to finish.
➢ To revise two papers previously delivered at conferences so that they can be submitted to journals for publication.

• In fact, while revising “How can science be both feminist and objective?” it turned into three papers, one of which is a chapter in Volume 15 of the Philosophy of Science Handbook, Philosophy of Anthropology and Sociology (see attached hard copy of pdf and print out of the webpage from Elsevier publicizing the volume). The publisher says the volume will be available in October 2006. Though I had sketched the main ideas for this chapter and presented them at the Loekmer Conference in 2004, the main work on this chapter was done during August and September of 2005 (during the sabbatical). Though this work was far more time consuming than I thought it would be, it was also very productive. It opened up a new area of research that has enriched my previous work. I am now quite familiar with current work on feminist methodology in the social sciences, specifically anthropology and sociology. The references from this piece give a good idea of the extent of my reading. The majority of reading was done during the sabbatical.

• Both the second and third papers grew out of revisions to a paper that I presented in 2004 at the International Association of Women Philosophers conference in Gothenborg, Sweden. At that conference, I presented the main idea that thinking of science as building models could provide a way to understand why it is that we should be thinking about values when we do science.
  ▪ The second paper is “Feminist Philosophy of Science: 'Standpoint' and Knowledge” scheduled for publication in 2008 in the interdisciplinary journal Science and Education (also attached paper and print out of journal information). In this paper I consider the value of feminist epistemology for understanding scientific knowledge and how this understanding could improve science education.
  ▪ The third paper is “Activist research and the objectivity of science” which will be published this fall (2006) in the American Philosophical Association, Feminism and Philosophy newsletter (page proof attached along with the link to American Philosophical Association publications website). This paper also uses the model-theoretic approach to understanding science and considers whether activist science could be good science. A first version of this paper was presented at the Philosophy of Social Science Roundtable in March 2006 and then revised based on comments received at that time.

• Another paper presented at a conference in 2004 was revised and submitted for presentation at the American Philosophical Association conference in 2007, “Underdetermination and feminist values”. This paper is currently called “The ‘Gap’ Argument: Underdetermination and Feminist Values”.
I also wrote an abstract for a panel for the 4S (Society for the Social Studies of Science) group meetings in the fall of 2006. This has been accepted and I will be presenting in Vancouver at the 4S meeting in November 2006.

While not listed originally as a goal, being on sabbatical gave me time to attend a number of conferences. In some cases, I presented my own work. However, there were a variety of benefits from attending these conferences. The most immediate benefit was updating my knowledge of epistemology, one of the key areas of philosophy. This is important for teaching Introduction to Philosophy. The conferences are listed below:

Philosophy of Social Science Roundtable, UC Santa Cruz (presenter), March 2006.
American Philosophical Association, Pacific Division, Portland, Oregon (session organizer and chair of another session), March 2006.
American Philosophical Association, Central Division, Chicago, Illinois (session organizer and chair of another session), April 2006.
Society for Exact Philosophy, UC San Diego, May 2006.
Pacific Division, SWIP (Society for Women in Philosophy), UCLA, May 2006.
Episteme Conference, University of Toronto, June 2006.

In addition, I attended colloquia at University of California, Riverside (philosophy department), University of California, San Diego (philosophy department and science studies program)

To learn some basic econometric techniques and data analysis used in the social sciences in order to better understand the use of models in the social sciences.
I was not able to accomplish this. It remains a goal but not one that I was able to accomplish at this time. The extensive research that I did in methodology in anthropology and sociology replaced the work in econometrics.

To develop a website on Critical Thinking about Science (including both the natural and social sciences). The website will support my PHI 11 Critical Thinking, but will also be accessible to other RCC faculty and students.
This is up at http://faculty.rcc.edu/crasnow/Science%20webpage%20copy/science1.html. I consider it a work in progress, however it is currently functional. The homepage gives an overview of the importance of science in relation to public policy and personal choices and some brief discussion of what is involved in evaluating scientific information when one is not an expert. The topics linked are global warming, genetic engineering, evolution, consciousness and the brain. This is an ongoing project and I anticipate that the topics will change from time to time. At the moment, I am working on units on Gender and Race.

To investigate the feasibility of a course on Science and Values. When I say that I will explore the feasibility what I mean is that it seems clear that values play a role in science in a variety of ways, some pernicious and some acceptable. I am not sure how to best discuss this in an undergraduate course. It may be that it would be an introduction to philosophy of science course or perhaps a course in how to think about science generally. I would want to explore what lower division courses of this sort are taught at various institutions, or develop an original course that meets the educational needs of understanding scientific reasoning. If I am vague here it is precisely because I need to spend time thinking about and researching the question.

I have written a course outline that I will present to my discipline in late August. I anticipate that it will go to the curriculum committee for approval this fall (2006).

III. BENEFITS OF THE SABBATICAL LEAVE TO RCCD

- Critical Thinking about Science website.
  - Benefit to my own students as it will be used to expand my Critical Thinking course.
  - Benefit to district students as I have made the website publicly available and other philosophy faculty have already expressed an interest in using it with their courses.
  - Benefit to faculty: the website is a gateway to information about a variety of issues in the sciences and some key issues in the philosophy of science.
  - Benefit to the district: as the site is publicly accessible I have shared it with other faculty around the country and they too have expressed an interest in using it.

- New curriculum which benefits students: I have written a course outline for an Introduction to Philosophy of Science. This course is designed to increase understanding of the way in which science provides reliable knowledge, enable students to distinguish science from pseudoscience, and aid in making judgments about public policy when it is informed by science.

- My international visibility as the result of publications. The chapter in the Philosophy of Science Handbook is particularly important in this respect. Many of the authors have established international reputations.
  - This benefits the district in that my visibility is also district visibility.
  - This benefits students in that they have contact with a faculty member who is active in her discipline and functions as part of the scholarly community. That the scholarly community is viable, meaningful, and critical community is an important lesson of a liberal arts education.

- My internationality visibility through conference attendance and presentation. The benefit to the district and the students is substantially the same as stated above. Both publication and participation in conferences and local university colloquia benefit RCCD as they make the college visible.
- Finally, as intangible as it is, it must always be acknowledged that the intellectual revitalization that a successful sabbatical, such as mine has been, returns an invigorated and intellectually energized employee. The energy with which I worked during the time I devoted to my scholarly pursuits is now employed on the accreditation self-study for Norco. I have not entirely dropped my research, nor will I ever. I will be attending several conferences this fall and presenting at least one new paper.

IV. FUTURE PROSPECTS

As you can see from the above, there are several things that are in process and that have been begun during the sabbatical but are not yet finished. As I see it, this is a good thing, for one of the goals of the sabbatical to finish it with momentum to carry one through the coming years. The main work that I see for the future is listed below:

- The book on objectivity: The revised outline is attached with notes on which parts are well on their way to completion and how they are related to the work that I have done during the sabbatical.
- A critical thinking book: the work that I did on the Critical Thinking About Science webpage and my general dissatisfaction with the critical thinking texts that I have been using, are motivating me to write my own text. I currently teach the Critical thinking course as a hybrid and would like to begin by rewriting the lessons. As I see it, the lessons that appear on the web would serve as the outline for a text. I plan to start work on this during the spring of 2007 (assuming that my work on Norco accreditation will be more or less complete at that time!).
- Econometrics: The work that I do in philosophy of the social sciences is becoming increasingly important to me. Econometrics is one of the leading methods used in the social sciences. Much of the statistical information that is reported in the popular press is distilled from studies that use econometric methodology. I consider it vital that I “go back to school” either literally or metaphorically to learn about these techniques.
- I continue to work on papers that were started during the sabbatical year. Most immediately, I am on the program for the 4S annual meeting in Vancouver in November 2006. I am completing work on the presentation for that panel. I have submitted a paper for consideration for the APA Pacific Division meeting (a revision of “The ‘Gap’ Argument: Underdetermination and Feminist Values”).
- I hope to teach the philosophy of science course that I have written the outline for next fall.
- I am involved in the new honors program at RCC. I would like to see a series of lectures during which faculty would present work that they are doing to honors students in a small informal setting that would encourage discussion with those students. I hope to work with the honors coordinators to organize these sessions next year.

SABBATICAL LEAVE REPORT 2005-2006

TAMRA DIBENEDETTO
Review of Goals and Activities of my Sabbatical Leave Request:
The primary purpose of my sabbatical leave was to complete the final requirements of a Ph.D. in English at the University of California, Riverside. These requirements included:

1) Preparation for Comprehensive Examinations: Reading and research as listed on the reading lists for each area of specialization, as listed in my sabbatical leave proposal, Appendix B;
2) Comprehensive exams:
   a. Three, 3-hour written examinations, one for each area of specialization, and
   b. One, 3-hour, comprehensive oral examination conducted by a five-member panel of faculty;
3) Writing and Approval of dissertation prospectus: Research and writing of the document plus submission to three-member dissertation committee; revisions and final approval;
4) Drafting the dissertation (approx. 225 pages divided into five chapters), and conducting further research as needed; submitting drafts of each chapter to committee members for comments and suggested revisions.
5) Revisions of the dissertation;
6) Final approval by all committee members;
7) Submission of the final document to UCR Graduate Division.

Secondary purposes proposed in my original request included gaining a fuller understanding of the design of the freshman composition program at UCR and establishing strong working relationships with the English Department faculty. My secondary purposes, therefore, were threefold:

1) to return from the sabbatical with strong professional connections with faculty, staff, and administrators at our leading institution of transfer
2) to maintain a broad professional network of contacts and relationships with university professors, lecturers, and graduate students in order to strengthen my understanding of pedagogical practices and ideas;
3) to gain a fuller understanding of University practices, policies, and procedures, including those governing academic standards and student conduct, as well as those governing UC matriculation standards, transfer expectations for all of our RCCD students, and in particular for our transferring English majors.
The sabbatical leave afforded me the opportunity to complete nearly every activity I originally proposed, as well as to complete others I’d never planned nor predicted. The following pages will explain those accomplishments in detail.

Completion of Activities to Meet the Goals of the Sabbatical Leave (listed chronologically, by academic quarter)

Fall 2005
During the fall 2005 quarter, I finished reading all of the remaining novels on the three reading lists for my exam areas. Over the course of two weeks beginning in late November, I took and passed all three written comprehensive examinations. On December 5, 2005, I sat for and passed my oral examination, which marked success in two major areas:

1) I was advanced to candidacy in UCR’s Ph. D. in English program (See Appendix A), and
2) I successfully completed the first goal of my sabbatical leave, right on schedule.

Winter 2006
During the winter 2006 quarter, an unforeseen and previously unimplemented program requirement somewhat slowed my progress toward the goals which I’d originally intended and originally proposed. My earlier plan had been to write and revise the first two chapters of my dissertation during the winter quarter, but my chair informed me that I should not begin the dissertation until the dissertation prospectus had been approved.

In the meantime, another minor obstacle materialized which further slowed my pace. Early in the fall 2005 semester, the English Department had voted to implement--for the first time since its inception a decade earlier--English 304, Professional Research Preparation, a course designed to assist students in writing the dissertation prospectus. (See Appendix B for catalogue description). This new course requirement affected all English graduate students who had been advanced to candidacy, but did not yet have their dissertation prospectus written and approved. Since I had taken exams only weeks before this requirement took effect and, therefore, had not yet written my prospectus, I was required to take the course.

Although initially I perceived the course as simply a hindrance to the successful completion of my sabbatical goals in the timeframe I had designated, I found the course invaluable in helping me to narrow the focus of my research on the works of Walker Percy, while at the same time (and somewhat paradoxically) expanding the field of research upon which I would conduct my analysis of those works. I experienced an epiphany of sorts during the winter 2006 quarter, which prompted a profound realization that my entire study was actually informed and influenced by postcolonial critical theory, even though I was relatively uninformed about the theory (actually “theories”) or its leading theorists at the time. Like most epiphanies, this one was exceptionally valuable in offering an insight to my work which had escaped me up to that moment, but also like most epiphanies, the truth of it hit me hard, a feeling akin to being punched in the stomach. For I realized that I now had to become familiar with a field of inquiry heretofore-foreign to me, one in which I’d had no formal training and very little informal exposure. Needless to say, the remainder of the quarter was spent researching postcolonialism(s) and striving to discern which theorists and theories best suited my particular study of Walker
Percy, a study which now bears the title, “‘How Does it Feel to be a Problem?’: Walker Percy and the Problematic of Race.” (See Appendix C for the complete prospectus.)

I am pleased to report that my dissertation prospectus was approved on March 3, 2006, during the first week of the spring 2006 quarter, only 90 days after the successful completion of my comprehensive exams. A year ago, that 90-day timeframe would have seemed incredibly excessive to me, but after experiencing the process of writing the dissertation firsthand, as well as being one of only two students (from a class of eighteen) to get prospectus approval within 90 days, I now consider it an accomplishment.

Although I was unable to complete the abovementioned tasks in the timeframe I had originally envisioned and proposed, I am so thankful that the English Department implemented the English 304 requirement, as it resulted in my awareness of a broader, richer field of inquiry upon which to build the foundation of my analysis of Percy’s works. At the same time, it presented to me an entire field of inquiry—whose body of theory and criticism is continuing to expand, almost exponentially—for which I had no formal preparation, either in terms of training or coursework. In other words, I had much to learn and little time to learn it. This, too, presented another obstacle in successfully completing the dissertation in the timeframe I’d proposed, a timeframe which was becoming more of an indication of my earlier naiveté about the demands of writing a dissertation than anything else.

Spring 2006
I continued researching postcoloniality and postcolonial theory, while beginning to write the first chapter of the dissertation. During this process, I encountered the field of American Studies, an interdisciplinary field of inquiry, which spoke a great deal to my topic, particularly the topic of white “American” identity as a social and political construct, one that is now and has been historically dependent upon the existence of an “Africanist Other.” This discovery, like the earlier discovery of postcolonial theory, helped me to refine even further my critical perspective and allowed me yet another vantage point for the study of the problematic of race in a southern, 20th century American writer like Walker Percy.

These intellectual insights were valuable, but were also interfering with my ability to write. The more I read, the more I knew I needed to know, so the more I continued researching and reading. Research is valuable, but it doesn’t put words on the page, exactly what I needed to be doing at this point. During the remainder of the spring quarter, I was able to complete the first chapter of the dissertation and submit it to the members of my committee for feedback. I have heard response from two members and have incorporated suggested revisions, and am still awaiting comments from the third member. In the meantime, I have begun the draft of my second chapter and plan to have it completed and submitted to my committee members by the end of October.

I have recently revised my original timeline for completion of the dissertation. I plan to complete all revisions and file the dissertation by May 2007, the deadline for filing in order to graduate in June 2007. Incredibly, even then I will still have completed the program a full year ahead of normative time.
Additional Activities to Meet the Goals

In addition to the completing the activities listed above, I also was invited by Dr. Rise Axelrod, Director of the English 1ABC program at UCR, to assist her in directing the English 1A (freshman composition) program. I also worked closely with Dr. Axelrod in refining the design of the English 1A, the 1st quarter course of UCR’s yearlong freshman composition series. I also had the pleasure of mentoring all of the new graduate teaching assistants (T.A.s) in the department as they took on the challenge of teaching composition for the first time. Each quarter, I took on the responsibility of mentoring a new cohort of graduate student T.A.s (as the previous cohorts moved on to teaching English 1B or 1C). I met with the new T.A.s weekly, usually for an hour, to discuss the fundamentals of teaching the course, including syllabus design, course expectations and requirements, departmental writing requirements, grading standards, student conduct, classroom management strategies, and record-keeping. Though I never imagined that Dr. Axelrod would privilege me with an invitation to assist her in directing the program, I could not believe my good fortune at being offered a role in the department which so perfectly matched—and even exceeded—the professional goals I set out to accomplish during this sabbatical. As a result of working so closely with Dr. Axelrod, I was introduced to every aspect of the English 1A course in particular and of the sequential freshman composition program in general. I also formed and nurtured close professional relationships with key faculty members in UCR’s composition program: Dr. Rise Axelrod, Director of English 1ABC; Dr. Steven Axelrod, Dr. John Briggs, Director of Basic Writing; Dr. Vorris Nunley, Asst. Prof., English, specializing in composition theory and pedagogy; and Dr. Katherine Kinney, English Department Chair. Equally important are the professional relationships I’ve established with English department support staff personnel, including Teri Carter, Student Affairs Assistant, English Composition program; Linda Nellany, Student Affairs Assistant, Undergraduate Studies; and Laurie Petty, Director of the Writing Resource Center.

Establishing these professional relationships has allowed me to make the professional relationships and contacts that are so vital to successful advising and matriculation of our students, especially those who will transfer to UCR. Likewise, each of these people has influenced my own perceptions and attitudes about the teaching of composition and the learning of composition. As a result of my interactions with them, I am returning to RCC with a renewed and clearer perspective of the English discipline in general and of freshman composition in particular.

Outcomes and Benefits of the Sabbatical Leave

Benefits to RCCD:

1. RCCD has gained a more fully developed, well-rounded, informed associate professor of English with enhanced research and writing capabilities, one who has grown tremendously, both as a teacher and as a learner.
2. RCCD further benefits by gaining an employee who is well-versed in Twentieth Century American literature, in the life and works of one of the great American intellectuals of the twentieth century, Walker Percy; and with the dynamic critical fields of postcolonial studies and American studies.
3. RCCD has also gained an employee with strong, established academic and professional connections with UCR and with key faculty members in the English department. I can better serve the District and am better prepared to serve on committees, especially those that focus on transfer requirements, matriculation, and student services, or any others that can benefit from the expertise I have gained while on sabbatical.

4. A concrete benefit to the District will be realized when I conduct a FLEX workshop for faculty, either one which relates the concept of the constructed white American identity to students (and identities) in the classroom, or one that discusses the pleasures and the pain inherent in pursuing a doctoral degree while teaching full-time. If time and scheduling permit, I hope to conduct both.

Benefits to RCCD Students

1. Because my research is so heavily engaged with the African American literary tradition, I have become much better prepared academically to teach English 21, African American literature I and English 22, African American Literature II. Students who take these courses will benefit from my expertise in the field. Likewise, students in my English 1B and English 1A composition courses will benefit (and are currently benefiting) from my ability to incorporate significant, current thought in the areas of cultural studies, American studies, and postcolonial discourses.

2. Students taking American Literature courses (English 14 and 15) with me will also benefit from the currency and expertise I have gained in the field of American literature as a result of the intense and extensive reading I completed in preparation for oral examinations and also the research I am currently conducting for my dissertation.

3. I have begun discussing with Dr. Kristi Woods, Associate Professor of History at RCC, the development of a linked-course sequence, linking History 15 (African American History II) and English 22 (African American Literature II); as well as linking History 7 (U.S. History) and English 15 (American Lit. II). I also plan to discuss with her and hopefully to develop an Honors set of linked courses, again linking History and English literature, which focus on the social, political, and economic effects of our nation’s own past history of “internal colonialism,” a history which has shaped not only our national identity, but also our personal conceptions of “American” identity as well.

4. A final benefit to our students is that, as a result of my enhanced professional relationships with the faculty and staff of the English Department at UCR, I am much better prepared to mentor and advise my English students who are planning to transfer to UCR.

Personal benefits

The benefits to me are immeasurable, as the discussion on the previous pages of this report confirm.

Concluding Remarks

As a scholar and associate professor at RCC, my primary goal has always been and will continue to be the advancement of knowledge and of learning, and the pursuit of intellectual excellence, whether for myself or for my students. The sabbatical leave offered me a rare opportunity to devote tremendous amounts of time and energy to these pursuits. For this, especially, I would like to express my sincere and deeply heartfelt thanks to all who were instrumental in supporting and approving my initial sabbatical leave request, including members of the PG&SL committee, members of the RCCD Board of Trustees, Tim Brown, English and Speech Communication Department Chair; Kristina Kaufmann, Associate Vice Chancellor, Institutional Effectiveness; and Dr. Ray Maghroori, Vice Chancellor, Academic Affairs. I’d like to extend a special thanks to Chancellor Salvatore Rotella, whose unwavering and generous support of the scholarly and professional endeavors of RCCD faculty is greatly appreciated and will long be remembered.

Wisdom and integrity cannot be found in any single domain. A broader viewpoint that breaks across disciplinary boundaries is needed, a way of understanding that combines knowing and sensing, feeling and judging.

-Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi

This radical process called Yoga asks us to live without solidifying our viewpoint or fixing our point of reference. There is no experience from our past that need become a fulcrum for the one we are having now – or the experiences we have yet to have.

-Donna Farhi

We are all ‘bodies’ of knowledge.

-Anna Deavere Smith

The yogi believes in nivruttī-mārga, the inward path of renunciation; the dancer believes in pravruttī-mārga, the outward path of creation. Yoga is jñāna-mārga, a path of knowledge; dance is bhakti-mārga, a path of love. The difference between yoga and dance is that yoga is the perfect art in action, whereas dance is a perfect art in motion.

-B.K.S. Iyengar

The creative process has been outlined to consist of a three, five or even six step chain of events that, as Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi notes in his book Creativity: Flow and the Psychology of Discovery and Invention, “is less linear than recursive. How many iterations it goes through, how many loops are involved, how many insights are needed, depends on the depth and breadth of the issues dealt with.”

The iterations, loops, and insights of the steps of creativity as mentioned by Csikszentmihalyi reflect the sabbatical journey I have taken since the Fall of 2005. Although officially ending as the Fall ‘06 semester begins, my sabbatical will never truly have an ending point, as the issues I have dealt with have encompassed much more than my sabbatical proposal could have ever predicted. In order to fully impart the various strands contained within the sabbatical experience, I will attempt to layer the six steps of the creative process with the six quotes mentioned above. In this way, I hope to honor the cursive nature of the unfolding that occurred within as well as the outer shell of experience and activities which made the sabbatical such a valued piece within our academic community.
Step 1: Preparation

The first [step] is a period of preparation, becoming immersed, consciously or not, in a set of problematic issues that are interesting and arouse curiosity.

(Csikszentmihalyi, p. 79).

Initially, the reaction to the approval of a sabbatical proposal is giddy excitement and the intoxicating game of, “What if?” Although plans and possibility loom large, it was the initial research at UCLA that truly began the investigation of one of my three major topics and thus the introduction to full immersion in the creative process. This occurred during the Fall 2005 semester while I was teaching 30 per cent of my teaching load to fulfill the sabbatical requirement.

The Arts Collection at UCLA houses many valuable documents and ephemera linked to the dance community, most notably the notebooks and immense collection of articles and material written by and about one of the pioneers of modern dance, Ruth St. Denis. The special Arts Collection also houses boxes of material kept by Jack Cole in one of his fanciful, oversize scrapbooks. Cole was the initial focal point of my sabbatical proposal – his stature as the “Father of Jazz Dance” has been one of fascination for me throughout my dancing career, yet he is not as easily recognizable to the fans of the musical theatre genre as Bob Fosse, Jerome Robbins or Michael Kidd – all formidable contemporaries of Cole. There has been a discernable lack of availability of videos and/or DVDs of Cole’s choreography, which has been one of the major oversights in painting a complete picture of Cole by the dance scholar or serious jazz dance student. The one biography of Cole is available, but out of print, so even the most rudimentary research on Cole is challenging, at best. Given the ephemeral nature of dance (even with increasing technological options) it is always an incomplete portrait when one is capturing the essence of the body in space, motion and time without a visual reference point. Nonetheless, I began my research by reserving the six boxes of material on Jack Cole, and making my way to Westwood most Fridays from September to December 2005.

Upon entering the Special Collections area, one must make an appointment and be buzzed in by one of the staff. No personal items are allowed in the viewing room, excepting a laptop computer to take notes (obviously, theft from the immense collection of television, theatre and motion picture items has driven this policy even for the scholarly researcher). Each photograph must be handled by archival gloves, and material can only be viewed one item at a time, one folder at a time. No photocopies are allowed on premises, so one must view and the multitude of newspaper and magazine articles, reviews, scripts, photographs, interviews and the like with a discerning eye.

The real voyage of discovery consists not in seeking new landscapes, but in having new eyes.

-Marcel Proust

Taking in all of the material in the Jack Cole Collection was truly a unique opportunity for me to examine my understanding of who Cole was as a dancer, choreographer and teacher, given my basic knowledge of Cole’s work. From my days as an undergraduate at UCLA, I was exposed to Cole through one of his last students, Madeleine Scott. Ms. Scott was our Senior level technique professor, and she utilized Cole’s warm-up and preparatory sequences for our first quarter. I can distinctly recall the disbelief and resistance my peers and I shared over the odd warm-up, which reminded all of us as a yoga class on amphetamines! This approach was quite the contrast to our other, more stately and traditional modern dance techniques taught during each quarter. None of us had ever done cartwheels as one of our sequences across the floor, or handstands against the wall! We were told that Cole did cartwheels and handstands to reinforce the correct upper body placement one should have with or without bearing ones body weight on the arms and hands. Considering that the current dance, bodywork and fitness buzzword is “core strength”, it seems in retrospect that Cole instinctively understood that upper back stability and abdominal strength were fully integrated in this weight bearing work, reinforcing this key concept in stability and alignment in any movement sequence.

Using these “new eyes” and the distance that time affords is a chance to view the greater landscape of historical information in the performing arts and with the creative process. One of the greatest gifts of sabbatical is the allowance of time to read, reflect, digest and re-read material relevant to one’s topic and any related information. I was particularly struck by the work of Howard Gardner and Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi. Both have written several works on intelligence and creativity. Gardner’s main work has been in the concept of multiple intelligences while at Harvard’s Project Zero, while Csikszentmihalyi’s has concerned flow and the creativity in the arts and sciences. Investigating key works of both authors gave me a new perspective on the creative process in regards to Cole’s work and also my own as an artist. As an appendix to this report, an annotated bibliography will amplify the books, videos and DVDs utilized in my research.

In addition to the research at my alma mater, I was busy at home on the internet, searching dance history sites and Ebay. Yes, Ebay. Ebay is an ever-changing source of magazines, photographs and books pertinent to Cole and his contemporaries. Since many of his choreographic work was with stars such as Rita Hayworth, Marilyn Monroe and Jane Russell, Ebay was full of potential treasures to be had, unfortunately, many times for the price outside my personal comfort zone and wallet. However, I was able to collect various Dance: Stage and Screen and Life magazines, programs, photographs, and most critically, videos of movies choreographed by Cole that are currently unavailable on DVD. One film, Tonight and Every Night, is notoriously difficult to obtain but, much to my relief, I was the successful bidder for this important piece of Cole’s work.

In addition to the research on Cole, I began preparing for Level One Teacher Training by participating in regular Hatha and Vinyasa Flow yoga classes as well as my personal asana and meditation practice in September, 2006. As Cole’s work utilized yoga postures, it was important to make the physical and mental connections to the source material through direct experience. In addition, Cole was described by many of his students as their guru, which in the yogic tradition is a teacher who is valued not only for their knowledge and expertise of the art form, but for their spiritual intuition as well. I was interested if the correlation of guru was more than just semantics.
Immersion in the yogic lifestyle also included research on yoga and ayurveda, which is the ancient Indian approach to diet and lifestyle. At first glance much of the information available at the local bookstore or on-line reflects a distinctly Western approach which differs completely from one of the East’s most contemplative practices. Titles such as Yoga for Healthy Knees or Cool Yoga Tricks reinforce the separatist view of the body that pervades the American approach to life and the relationship to the body which is direct conflict with the origins and intensions of yoga as primarily a spiritual pathway. It is no secret that American society is obsessed with youth and body image. Much advertising time in spent on convincing people that their bodies need fixing and a more youthful appearance by diet, exercise or surgery is just a click or phone call away. The mind/body connection is ignored while matters of the spirit rarely figure into the mix. This is not to discount the health benefits of weight loss and general physical fitness, however, American culture emphasizes the need to feel younger and sexier whatever one’s actual age, not the pursuit of full integration of one’s self through mental, physical, and spiritual practice.

In contrast, yoga and ayurveda link mind, body and spirit at every opportunity. Since the yogic tradition goes back over 5,000 years, study of the eight limbs of yoga and the healing and purification of ayurveda encompasses a multi-faceted approach to personal and social conduct, physical and mental health, and spiritual growth. Vigor and health are not just a physical outcome of diet and exercise – they are incorporated with every aspect of life. Yoga and ayurveda books, magazine and journal articles, and the level one Hatha yoga training manual provided a deep introduction to this substantive subject, all of which are included in the annotated bibliography. This aspect of the sabbatical process will undoubtedly have the most long-lasting and pervasive impact as a student and teacher. My curiosity may never be satisfied in this quest for uniting body and spirit, mind and matter.

In addition to yoga and ayurveda, I sought to familiarize myself with the history and development of what is now known as Classical Indian Dance. Naturally, India is rich with a variety of religious and political influences throughout its history, including the colonization by the British and relatively recent independence of India and creation of Pakistan. Dance is never created in a vacuum – it directly reflects the values of the people and time of its creation. Dance held a lofty position for most of India’s history, but suffered tremendously as temple support for dance began to lag in the period prior to British rule. However, as Indian nationalism began to take hold, dance once again became a symbol of cultural pride, followed by a resurgence of traditional and new dance forms. In this context it was most important to see the through line of this aspect of dance as a performing art.

This plunge into Indian art and culture also included contemporary literature and commentary, motion pictures, and music. Accessibility to Indian motion pictures and music especially has improved dramatically over the past few years. Since India is the major producer of films in the world, it is no surprise that Bollywood, an homage to the movie musicals of the forties and fifties, is one of the most exciting genres in the world today.
India’s melting pot of religious influences is one of its most fascinating aspects. Hindu theology is particularly pervasive in many yoga studios and retreats. As I attended the Shonshoni Yoga Ashram for my level one Hatha yoga training it was very exciting to experience a different tradition in worship and devotion. Both Hindu and Zen Buddhist traditions are observed at Shonshoni at the Main Temple and Ma Shrine, and the beautiful murtis and icons are presented with great joy and reverence. Although meditation is not a religion-specific practice, it is enhanced in a sacred space, shared with others who are practicing together.

All of these experiences of preparation and immersion were essential to be able to fully explore the issues that initially drew me to Jack Cole as the main topic of my sabbatical, mainly how influential was Jack Cole, and how yoga and Classical Indian dance figured into the matrix of his life.

Step 2: Incubation
The second phase of the creative process is a period of incubation, during which ideas churn around below the threshold of consciousness. It is during this time that unusual connections are likely to be made…when ideas call to each other on their own, unexpected combinations may come into being.
(Csikszentmihalyi, p. 79).

As the fall semester and winter holidays came to a close, the new year provided a time of intense immersion, incubation and integration. Immersion continued with the regimen of daily meditation and yoga, reading and research which included the on-line portion of my level one Hatha yoga course. The initial research period yielded many new directions and possibilities to be explored. In addition to the biographical information related to Cole and his work, I began to focus my attention on the divinity of the creation of art and the creative process itself. These two topics became intertwined with my personal practice of meditation and yoga. The possibility of the intentional integration of the divine spirit within every physical posture or creative product then gave rise to yet another topic: the split of the body, mind and spirit so prevalent in American/Puritan society.

For example, the research on the state of dance in America during the late 19th century was a fascinating issue which directly impacted the work of Ruth St. Denis and thus Jack Cole. Nancy Lee Ruyter, in her book Visionaries and Reformers, recounts the conflicted view of the arts by the pillars of American society:

Art elicited their suspicion on many counts. It cost money, and yet it fulfilled no real need. Art was foreign and had aristocratic associations.
Great art had been the product of only mature societies, prior to their downfall. Finally, art was sensual, and much of art's content was unsatisfactory on moral grounds...

This conflicted view of art still impacts the state of the arts in the United States at present. As a nation “suspicious” of the arts, it is no surprise that financial support is relegated to corporations and private donors rather than through any kind of substantial governmental subsidy or grants.
In American culture art is often objected to “on moral grounds”. This viewpoint, combined with the perceived lack of practical necessity, is recited whenever art is deemed controversial and thus in need of censure. Visual art, music and theatre have all had their turns in provoking a response, however, dance is often cited as objectionable, as the sexual potential of the movements of the human body (and the minds of those observing the body) may lead all into the mire of unsavory repute and worse. In order for dance to survive, Ruyter writes,

The evils of dance had to be neutralized, grandiose goals had to be established and promoted, and dance had to be brought in line with some part of American culture. Dance had to develop positive values for American society.

Throughout the next one hundred years, dance as an American art form strives for legitimacy and respect. This is especially true of the genre of jazz dance and its practitioners, most of who work in the entertainment industry and must contend with the economic restrictions and moral implications of such endeavors. Certainly Jack Cole felt this conflict keenly, as he rarely ventured into the concert dance arena. This clash for legitimacy is rarely resolved, compounded with the content of actual movement vocabulary in the jazz genre. As Judith Lynne Hanna observes in her book Dance, Sex and Gender, “A strand of the jazz idiom requires flaunting movement with rhythmic compulsion to project a state of orgasmic excitement.” One could hardly call jazz movement such as this “neutralized” or sanitized.

So as my immersion continued with these additional topics, the incubation period began as the observations and “a-ha’s” became the connective threads of major themes and variations to be developed. Jack Cole clearly received instruction in the postures and breathing of yoga, however, did his teachings include the spiritual aspect of yoga? Was his regimen and influence comparable to that of a guru, or to those of a tyrant? Did the devotional aspect of Ruth St. Denis influence Cole more than the practicality and advocacy of Ted Shawn? How does one infuse legitimacy and respect into a genre fraught with questionable moral content and seemingly low-class values?

More importantly, how do I value my own creative process and artistic contribution as viewed through these critical, historical lenses? Is every dance, as Ruth St. Denis so ardently proposed, “A devotional act”? How does one impart a spiritual approach to an art form seen by some as perpetually morally questionable or as a trifle amusement or competitive event? And, in an academic environment, how does the community view the value of the arts and those who practice them?

This brings into line the ongoing experiences I have throughout my career as an artist and educator which I have labeled, “Inform and Defend.” I am sure every educator in every subject area and discipline has had this experience at one time or another; however, it seems that the visual and performing arts have more than their share of “justify your existence, please” encounters since the passing of Proposition 13 in the late 1970’s. For example, at one memorable RCC District curriculum meeting where new dance courses were brought to the committee, one member piped up in all sincerity, “Well, does dance really involve problem-solving skills”? I might hasten to add that I feel fairly certain that no one at that particular meeting would ever even consider asking if any science or mathematics course contained “problem-solving skills”. In the defense of the question uttered in all sincerity, the arts seem to many to employ only a “do what you feel” criteria, not aesthetically informed choices based on a clear understanding of the artistic principles of the given art form that guide the creator and performer.

The thinking goes along the lines of, “After all, it’s just dancing - aren’t you just making up steps and moving to the music?” The inference is clear: what value could there possibly be in that?

From these ongoing encounters throughout my career and the gradual understanding of yoga as mind, body and spirit integration, some basic questions have crystallized for me as a dance educator, performer and choreographer. Are Americans in general so disconnected from their bodies as a culture and society that de-valuing the wisdom of the body is one way of pushing away our humanity – the platform of our humanity? We all may not share genius IQs but everyone shares the ownership of one’s own body. Does this basic rejection and devaluation of anything the body has to teach us through the physical discipline of dance, martial arts, sports, Pilates, yoga, or whatever have the effect of subtly reinforcing the idea that knowledge is purely intellectual, vastly superior, and that anything the body has to tell us is automatically suspect? Puritan codes of conduct rejected dance as promoting it would thus encourage sexual licentiousness, and the downfall of society would be right at hand. In this mindset, certainly anything focused on the body’s own movement couldn’t possibly be the doorway to some kind of spiritual understanding! Certainly, this viewpoint is borne out every semester when students in my Dance Appreciation classes are often shocked to learn that dance is a vital component to spiritual enlightenment in many cultures around the world.

Step 3: Intuition

_The vague anticipatory perception that orients creative work in a promising direction._

(Policastro as cited by Csikszentmihalyi, p.413).

Not formally included in many of the traditional demarcations of the creative process, Csikszentmihalyi makes a point of noting the value of intuition as a component within the steps of incubation and insight. Based on my own experience, I would have to agree. At a certain point, one must follow the hunches that begin to emerge, otherwise the creative problem seems too big and broad to attempt within a reasonable period of time. Around March, 2006 I began to realize that the intense study and practice of yoga in and of itself was worthy of sabbatical. The teaching of yoga also involves the study of anatomy, the ancient Sanskrit language, the literature of texts such as the Yoga Sutras and the Bhagavad-Gita, in addition to the practical aspects of teaching new movement sequences. My plan to study Classical Indian dance with Ramaa Bharadvaj after her return from her own sabbatical to India was overly ambitious given our respective schedules and plans. I instead chose to focus on researching the dance, history, contemporary literature, and film of India. This has given me an overall understanding of the culture of India which served to enhance my study of Ruth St. Denis, Uday Shankar, La Meri and other influences of Jack Cole as well as complement the immersion into yoga.

Wisdom and integrity cannot be found in any single domain. A broader viewpoint that breaks across disciplinary boundaries is needed, a way of understanding that combines knowing and sensing, feeling and judging.

-Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi

Step 4: Insight

...sometimes called the “A-ha!” moment...when the pieces of the puzzle fall together.

There may be several insights interspersed with periods of incubation, evaluation and elaboration.

(Csikszentmihalyi, p. 79-80).

Insight took the form of several key moments and experiences during the spring, but one in particular stands out as a high point. Although my research and classes were ongoing during this time, all strands came together at Shoshoni Yoga Retreat in April, 2006. I have attended many workshops and teacher trainings throughout the years; however, this particular training had the added benefit of its location, which inspired thoughtful inquiry in a decidedly spiritual setting. Being somewhat isolated in an area completely surrounded by forest, Shoshoni is located forty minutes outside of Boulder, Colorado on 250 acres of a former equestrian summer camp. Our first yoga class began at 5:30am each morning, and our last class ended around 9:00pm. The schedule was designed well, with time for reflection and study built into our daily activities. Experiencing such a profound integration of mind, body and spirit in the company of other like-minded individuals was inspiring and energizing. A copy of the daily schedule is included in the supporting material packet along with my certificate of completion.

It was at Shoshoni I found truth in the words of Ruth St. Denis: every dance is a devotional act. Furthermore, every deed, word, and movement can be a devotional act, given one’s ability and intention to readily access the spiritual connection flowing within one’s self in the moment. This became very clear to me in executing the various postures, pranayama, and meditation every day. Although one carries accumulated experience, intellectual knowledge, and muscle memory from each day into the next, it is breathing fully in the moment that is occurring NOW that brings one to a point of awareness of the divine within. It was as if everything came swirling together—all that I have intrinsically known, intellectually acquired combined with somatic experiences—distilled into a basic truth. This inner connection to divine presence, no matter one’s religious affiliation, is available at any moment. Given our societal penchant for compartmentalizing and categorizing every aspect of life, this interconnected thread that begs to be considered fresh in each moment gives one pause:

This radical process called Yoga asks us to live without solidifying our viewpoint or fixing our point of reference. There is no experience from our past that need become a fulcrum for the one we are having now—or the experiences we have yet to have.

-Donna Farhi
On a purely pedagogical level, making our viewpoint fluid would allow for flexibility and change in the classroom, studio and lab as we approach the student, not as one in a long line of those who have come before and will come in the future, but as beings in the present moment, new, without foisting our biases on them. So it is not necessarily bringing in new material, or new teaching strategies that will energize us as educators – it is truly as Proust envisioned – it is in using our “new eyes”, not just by providing new landscapes.

Of course, it is somewhat disconcerting to consider that much of one’s life has been spent reviewing the past or planning the future, rather than paying attention to the moment at hand, all starting with the simplicity of the breath and the intention of devotion within ourselves and our actions. The yogis of five thousand years ago may not have had 401k plans, cell phones, computers, or high definition television, but their yearnings to find meaning within one’s daily life is the same as ours. We just have more distractions.

Step 5: Evaluation

_The fourth component is evaluation, when the person must decide whether the insight is valuable and worth pursuing...It is the period of self-criticism, of soul-searching._

(Csikszentmihalyi, p. 80).

As I began to compile all of my research materials in July, 2006 for the multi-media presentation on Jack Cole, it was a daunting task. In my original proposal I had planned to attend the Jazz Dance World Congress to gauge the interest in Jack Cole from the varied attendee, however, I was unaware of the new every other year format for the Congress, so this aspect of my research would be unable to be completed. However, I had accumulated a wealth of research material over the prior eleven months. So many ideas, quotes, film clips, photos – to keep within a two hour presentation time seemed very unlikely. At the same time, I began to doubt myself and the direction of my research – had I done enough in-depth research or had I gone too superficially in trying to cover so many aspects of Cole and the period of his most accessible work, mainly the 1950’s?

In addition to the organizational approach, I was stuck as to how to reconcile the ground-breaking work described by reviewer after reviewer from all of my sources with the almost quaint, yet over-the-top choreography I had been viewing from Cole’s movie work. Since none of his concert work and very little of his Broadway work exists on film, it is virtually impossible to gauge the startling effect Cole’s dancing and choreography initially had on viewers in the late 1930’s except by written description and 8x10 photographs. Was the fact that Cole prepared the group of dancers who would then supercede him (and always cite him as their chief influence or guru) that keeps him elevated as the “Father of Jazz Dance” rather than for his own work?

Gradually, as I began to sift through the note cards of various sources and topics I had identified for the presentation, a theme began to emerge. Jack Cole, given his great stature within the jazz dance community and his simultaneous lack of visual touchstones, seemed to be a “dynamic enigma”. From the definitions of dynamic (“of or relating to physical force or energy”) and enigma (“an inscrutable or mysterious person”) came a presentation of 115 slides and video/DVD clips which covered Cole’s influences, life and work and an analysis and evaluation of his legacy for the current generation of jazz dancers. A copy of the presentation slides is provided in the appendix to this report.

At the same time, I became more convinced than ever that Cole had utilized yoga postures and principles for the warm-up of his nightclub dancers and the core of dancers he directed at Columbia Pictures. Accounts of his movement sequences, along with photographs and the sequence “Ain’t There Anyone Here For Love?” from the motion picture Gentlemen Prefer Blondes convinced me that Cole had indeed used specific yoga postures, but combined them in dynamic sequences so that the dancers would gain strength and alignment while working on sustained, continuous movement. Interestingly enough, a derivative branch of yoga, known as Vinyasa yoga, has emerged strongly during the past ten years, linking postures together in specific movement phrases not unlike Cole’s.

As I completed work on the multi-media presentation, I took time to read Anna Deavere Smith’s book letters to a young artist. Smith gives advice to artists of all disciplines throughout, but the final chapter included a story about Smith’s first yoga teacher. The text expanded on the concept of presence and art. The most striking image that Smith offers is this:

[Presence] is as simple as the turning of a lightbulb – but it comes from being in tune with where you are and what you are doing.

Again, the concept of being in the moment, in tune with one’s creative work was being driven home for me. Using a phrase from an earlier chapter of Smith’s book, I had a personal lightbulb pop up. This particular phrase seemed to encapsulate all of the strands of my sabbatical, and so the title and direction of my choreography was set.

We are all ‘bodies’ of knowledge.

-Anna Deavere Smith

Step 6: Elaboration

The last component of the process is elaboration. It is probably the one that takes up the most time and involves the hardest work…many fresh insights emerge as one is presumably just putting finishing touches on the initial insight.

(Csikszentmihalyi, p. 80).

My elaborative work currently continues with the creation of the piece, ‘Bodies’ of Knowledge, which will premiere in the Fall 2006 Faculty Dance Concert, Kinetic Conversations on December 1 and 2, 2006. As I work on the movement motifs in the piece, I am attempting to meld striking images that will echo specific yoga postures and mudras (hand positions) and the dynamic phrasing of Cole’s work performed to a beautiful recorded collage of music which evokes both Eastern and Western influences.

The approach to the piece with the dancers is very different from my previous work. I have incorporated an opening and closing meditation at each rehearsal, and we warm up using yoga postures in sequence. The dancers have an understanding of the concept and the influences I am drawing from, and during the rehearsal process they will have a chance to attend one of two Jack Cole multi-media presentations I will be giving on campus at the Digital Library Auditorium. The first date is Thursday, October 19, at 12:50pm, offered as one of the Arts at 12:50pm Series presented by the Performing Arts Department. This will be an abridged version of the full presentation. The two hour presentation will be on Thursday, November 16 at 7:00pm. This evening event is just two weeks prior to the production of Kinetic Conversations at Landis Performing Arts Center. Both multi-media presentations are free to the college community and the public.

I will be working collaboratively with the dancers on ‘Bodies’ of Knowledge as I am committed to utilizing from their particular nuances within their own bodies and experiences. Choreographically, I have certain phrases of movement that I am creating, but it is essential to include the dancer’s input and their own bodily logic and intuition to the process in order to be true to the spirit of the intent of the piece.

As my sabbatical has officially come to an end with the submission of this report, I do know that all of the research and creative work is a very significant point on my life-long continuum of learning and understanding. I have had an enriching year and I am so grateful for the opportunity to have explored the inter-relationships among Jack Cole, yoga, Indian culture and my own artistic process in such depth. I close with a quote by B.K.S. Iyengar, noted yogi and author, which encapsulates my journey perfectly:

The yogi believes in nivrtti-mārga, the inward path of renunciation; the dancer believes in pravrtti-mārga, the outward path of creation. Yoga is jñāna-mārga, a path of knowledge; dance is bhakti-mārga, a path of love. The difference between yoga and dance is that yoga is the perfect art in action, whereas dance is a perfect art in motion.
The following points are the brief appraisal of the “professional value of the activities while on leave and the manner in which the knowledge and experience gained may be applied to the benefit to the District.”

- All material pertaining to Jack Cole will be incorporated into the historical aspect of my teaching load, specifically Dance 6 - Dance Appreciation and D32, 33, and 34 – Beginning, Intermediate, and Advanced Jazz Dance.
- The college and community at large will have the opportunity to attend the multi-media presentations on Jack Cole held in the Digital Library Auditorium. An abridged version will be presented on Thursday, October 19 during the College Hour. The full presentation and reception will be held on Thursday, November 16 at 7:00pm. Performing Arts students may also use this presentation for credit for any classes which include outside attendance at related concerts, master classes, or lectures.
- Yoga certification and related classes, such as Pilates, have been incorporated into my regular teaching assignment of D32, 33, and 34 – Beginning, Intermediate, and Advanced Jazz Dance. Yoga is particularly applicable to strengthening, flexibility, and balancing aspects of training the body. This is especially pertinent in the area of injury prevention and core strength.
- I have offered an introduction to Yoga class as a FLEX offering to faculty and staff during Fall Flex Days and will be offering an introductory yoga class for new Faculty on November 15. Those attending the FLEX Day class expressed a strong desire to continue such a class throughout the semester, so upon approval of the Faculty Development Committee we have been meeting on Fridays from 1:00-2:15pm and will continue to do so until the end of the Fall semester. I anticipate teaching another class of this nature during the Spring semester. Since yoga incorporates intense mental and physical integration, it is an opportunity for faculty and Staff to relieve stress and encourage balance of mind and body.
- Every aspect of my sabbatical is incorporated in the creation of the piece, ‘Bodies of Knowledge’, which will premiere in the Fall 2006 Faculty Dance Concert, Kinetic Conversations on December 1 and 2, 2006. As I work on the movement motifs in the piece, I am attempting to meld striking images that will echo specific yoga postures and mudras (hand positions) and the dynamic phrasing of Cole’s work performed to a beautiful recorded collage of music which evokes both Eastern and Western influences.

Just as it is almost impossible to separate the dancer from the dance, it is difficult to parcel out each aspect of my sabbatical and its intended application. All of my research and related classes will weave their way into the teaching of any class or artistic endeavor on behalf of the District.

Report No.: V-A-4-a Date: November 21, 2006

Subject: Budget Adjustments

Background: The 2006-07 adopted budget represents our best estimates of both income and expenditures. As the year progresses, however, some accounts have surplus funds while others are underbudgeted. As provided in Title 5, Section 58307, the Board of Trustees may approve transfers between major expenditure classifications to allow for needed purchases. Unless otherwise noted, the transfers are within the unrestricted General Fund (Fund 11, Resource 1000). The following budget transfers have been requested:

We propose to assist the Foundation with process and technical activities associated with Datatel’s Benefactor administrative application software by providing consulting and programming support on an ad-hoc, as-requested basis from November 2006 through June 2007. Upon request, individual projects will be documented separately to show scope of work and estimates of effort. We propose to begin this work immediately at the convenience of the Foundation and Rose & Tuck.

Darren Rose will serve as your engagement partner and will be ultimately responsible for your satisfaction with Rose & Tuck’s services. Rose & Tuck’s work for the Foundation may require access to online Datatel resources (e.g. AnswerNet, application documentation, technical documentation); to the extent this access is needed to perform our work, we may request that the Foundation add Rose & Tuck staff working on this engagement to the list of the Foundation’s authorized users at Datatel. We may also require direct access (via telnet or VPN) to your Datatel system as part of performing our responsibilities.

Rose & Tuck recognizes that the access referenced above or other parts of our work may expose us to information that Datatel considers confidential. We have attached a signed confidentiality agreement to enable the Foundation to provide such access.

Equipment is defined as a fixed asset that does not lose its identity when removed from its location and is not changed materially or consumed immediately (typically, within a year) by use. Equipment has relatively permanent value and its purchase increases the value of the physical property such as furniture, vehicles, machinery, computers and furnishings that are not integral parts of the building or the building system.

F. If the CONTRACTOR demonstrates a consistent pattern of under-generating its contracted number of units, the number of contracted units may be reduced in subsequent years.

Professional Growth Advisor Training payments will be based on original Professional Growth Advisor Registration cards for each trained and qualified advisor and original meeting documentation including agenda, sign-in sheets, and participant evaluations. Networking session payments will be based on original meeting documentation including agenda, sign-in sheets, and participant evaluations.

F. YCCD/CDTC will withhold any payment until all required documentation has been received to substantiate enrolled units.

G. YCCD/CDTC will make final payment to CONTRACTOR upon satisfactory completion of services as described herein. The final expenditure report is due no later than July 31, 2007.

V. RETENTION OF RECORDS AND AUDITS

The CONTRACTOR will retain all programmatic and fiscal records for a minimum of five (5) full years from the date of final payment under this Agreement. The CONTRACTOR will make these records available to YCCD/CDTC upon request for audit purposes during the progress of the work and for five (5) years following final payment. B. CONTRACTOR shall comply with the provisions of the Fair Employment and Housing Act and the applicable regulations promulgated there under.

C. By signing this Agreement, the CONTRACTOR ensures that it will comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability.

X. INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS

It is understood that this is an Agreement by and between independent contractors and is not intended, and shall not be construed to create the relationship of agent, servant, employee, partnership, or joint venture.

XI. HOLD HARMLESS CLAUSE

Both the CONTRACTOR and YCCD/CDTC agree to hold harmless, defend, and indemnify the other party, and the officers, employees, boards, volunteers, and agents of the other party from and against any and all losses, claims or expense arising out of any liability or claim of liability for personal injury, bodily injury to persons, contractual liability and damage to property sustained or claimed to have been sustained arising out of activities of the parties to this Agreement or the activities of either party’s boards, officers, agents, employees, or volunteers. GENERAL CONTRACT TERMS AND CONDITIONS

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the agreement between the Los Angeles Community College District (the "District") and RIVERSIDE COMMUNITY COLLEGE ("Contractor"), dated 09/25/2006, the following General Contract Terms and Conditions shall apply and prevail:

1. INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR. While engaged in carrying out and complying with the terms of this agreement, the Contractor is an independent contractor, and not an officer, employee, partner, joint venturer, or agent of the District.

2. INVOICES AND PAYMENTS. Payment shall be made by the District's Accounts Payable Office upon provision of the goods and/or services described herein, and upon submittal of invoice(s) approved by the College President or appropriate designee; or appropriate District Office administrator, or designee. Payment by the District shall constitute full and final payment, unless the Contractor files a claim for error or omission within ninety (90) days of the date of invoice.

3. WARRANTY. Contractor warrants that all goods or services furnished under this agreement shall be in accordance with District specifications. All work and services shall be done and completed in a thorough, workmanlike manner. All goods shall be new, merchantable, fit for their intended purposes, free from all defects in materials and workmanship, free from defects in design, in good working order and shall perform in accordance with the manufacturer's standard specifications. All goods furnished and all work performed shall be subject to the District's inspection. Goods and services which are not in accordance and conformity with the above specifications, shall be rejected and, in the case of goods, promptly removed from the District premises at the Contractor's expense. When a sample is taken from a shipment and sent to a laboratory for test and the test shows that the sample does not comply with the specifications, the cost of such test shall be paid by the Contractor. On all questions concerning the acceptability of the goods and services, the decision of the District shall be final and binding upon the parties. The District shall not unreasonably exercise its judgment.

4. DEFAULT BY CONTRACTOR. The District shall hold the Contractor liable and responsible for all damages which may be sustained because of failure or neglect of the Contractor to comply with any term or condition herein, it being specifically provided that time shall be of the essence in the delivery of the purchased goods or services. If the Contractor fails or neglects to furnish or deliver any of the goods or services at the prices named and at the times and places herein stated or otherwise fails or neglects to comply with the terms of the purchase, the District may cancel the purchase in its entirety, or cancel or rescind any or all items affected by such default, and may, whether or not the purchase is canceled in whole or in part, purchase the goods or services elsewhere without notice to the Contractor. The District shall retain all other rights and remedies under law.

5. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENT. The District may terminate this agreement upon thirty (30) calendar days' prior written notice to the Contractor. In the event of such termination, each party shall be liable for all obligations in favor of the other party accruing prior to the date of such termination, but shall be released from all obligations or performance that would otherwise accrue subsequent to the date of such termination. In addition, this agreement may be subject to termination as provided in Section 18.

6. EXPENSES. The Contractor shall assume all expenses incurred in connection with performance except as otherwise provided in this agreement.

7. INDEMNIFICATION/LIMITATION OF LIABILITY. The Contractor shall indemnify, hold harmless, and defend the District, its Board of Trustees, officers, employees, agents, and representatives from and against all claims, liability, loss, cost, and obligations on account of, or arising from, the acts or omissions of the Contractor, or of persons acting on behalf of the Contractor, however caused, in the performance of the services specified herein. Contractor hereby waives and releases the District from any claims Contractor may have at any time arising out of or relating in any way to this agreement, whether or not caused by the negligence or breach of the District, its employees, or agents, except to the extent caused by the District's willful misconduct. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties agree that in no event shall the District be liable for any loss of Contractor's business, revenues or profits, or special, consequential, incidental, indirect or punitive damages of any nature, even if the District has been advised in advance of the possibility of such damages. This shall constitute the District's sole liability to Contractor and Contractor's exclusive remedies against the District.

8. AMENDMENT OF AGREEMENT. This agreement is the entire agreement between the parties as to its subject matter and supersedes all prior or contemporaneous understandings, negotiations, or agreements between the parties, whether written or oral, with respect thereto. All modifications and amendments to this agreement shall be in writing and signed by the authorized representatives of the District and the Contractor.

9. ASSIGNMENT OF AGREEMENT. This agreement may not be assigned or otherwise transferred, in whole or in part, by either the District or the Contractor without prior written consent of the other.

10. GOVERNING LAW. This agreement shall be deemed to have been executed and delivered within the State of California, and the rights and obligations of the parties hereunder, and any action arising from or relating to this agreement, shall be construed and enforced in accordance with, and governed by, the laws of the State of California or United States law, without giving effect to conflict of laws principles. Any action or proceeding arising out of or relating to this agreement shall be brought in the county of Los Angeles, State of California, and each party hereto irrevocably consents to such jurisdiction and venue, and waives any claim of inconvenient forum.

11. NON-DISCRIMINATION. The Contractor hereby certifies that in performing work or providing services for the District, there shall be no discrimination in its hiring or employment practices because of age, sex, race, religious creed, color, ancestry, national origin, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation, except as provided for in section 12940 of the Government Code. The Contractor shall comply with applicable federal and California anti-discrimination laws, including but not limited to, the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, beginning with Section 12900 of the California Government Code. The Contractor agrees to require compliance with this nondiscrimination policy by all subcontractors employed in connection with this agreement.

12. EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER. Contractor, in the execution of this agreement, certifies that it is an equal employment opportunity employer.

13. COMPLIANCE WITH LAW/PERMITS AND LICENSES. The Contractor and all of its employees or agents shall comply with all applicable laws, ordinances, rules and regulations, including but not limited to all applicable laws and regulations governing the bidding process, and shall secure and maintain in force such licenses and permits as are required by law, in connection with furnishing of goods or services hereunder.
14. ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COSTS. If either party shall bring any action or proceeding against the other party arising from or relating to this agreement, each party shall bear its own attorneys' fees and costs, regardless of which party prevails.
15. TAXES. California Sales Tax, Use Tax and/or the Los Angeles County Uniform Local Sales and Use Tax, where applicable, shall be separately identified on each invoice to the District. The federal excise tax, and state and local property taxes, are not applicable, as college districts are exempt therefrom.
16. NON-WAIVER. A waiver of a breach or default by the District under this agreement shall not be deemed a waiver of any subsequent breach or default. Failure of the District to enforce compliance with any term or condition of this agreement shall not constitute a waiver of such term or condition.
17. SEVERABILITY. The Contractor and the District agree that if any part, term, or provision of this agreement is found to be invalid, illegal, or unenforceable, such invalidity, illegality, or unenforceability shall not affect other parts, terms, or provisions of this agreement, which shall be given effect without the portion held invalid, illegal, or unenforceable, and to that extent the parts, terms, and provisions of this agreement are severable.
18. TERMINATION FOR NON-APPROPRIATION OF FUNDS. If the term of this agreement extends into fiscal years subsequent to that in which it is approved, such continuation of the agreement is contingent on the appropriation and availability of funds for such purpose, as determined in good faith by the District. If funds to effect such continued purpose are not appropriated or available as determined in good faith by the District, this agreement shall automatically terminate and the District shall be relieved of any further obligation.

Subject: Extend Contract-Printing of Schedules, Academic and Community Education

Background: On August 23, 2005, the Board of Trustees awarded a competitive bid to Valley Printers for the printing of schedules for academic classes and community education. The contract is renewable on a yearly basis, for a maximum period of five years subject to annual Board approval.

District staff recommends extending the contract for an additional one-year period. This will include the printing of academic class and community education schedules for Winter 2007, Spring 2007, Summer 2007 and Fall 2007. The amount paid to Valley Printers in 2005/2006 was $247,000. Ed Code 81644 authorizes public agencies to extend contracts with multi-year options for up to five years.

Subject: Surplus Property

Background: Education Code Section 81450 permits the Board of Trustees to declare District property as surplus if the property is not required for school purposes; is deemed to be unsatisfactory or not suitable for school use; or if it is being disposed of for the purposes of replacement. Education Code section 81452 permits surplus property to be sold at private sale, without advertising, if the total value of the property does not exceed $5,000. The District has determined that the property on the attached list does not exceed the total value of $5,000. To help defray disposal costs and to generate a nominal amount of revenue, the staff proposes that we consign the surplus property identified in the attachment to The Liquidation Company for disposal.

Recommended Action: It is recommended that the Board of Trustees by unanimous vote: (1) declare the property on the attached list to be surplus; (2) find that the property does not exceed the total value of $5,000; and (3) authorize the property to be consigned to The Liquidation Company to be sold on behalf of the District.

Parking was created to capture the financial activities of the parking operations at each campus. The primary revenue source is parking permit fees. Parking also receives revenue from parking meters and parking citations. Expenditures are for 75% of the operational costs of College Safety and Police and 100% of capital outlay costs, such as parking lot lighting, that directly benefit parking operations.

Subject: Proposed Agreement for Infrastructure Studies Project

Background: In preparation for campus long range planning and in anticipation of future project development at the District’s three campuses, Facilities Planning, Design and Construction along with Information Services and College Safety and Police have initiated utility infrastructure studies comprised of surveying existing utility infrastructure, researching as-built plans, preparing base mapping, and plotting the utilities on an overall set of plans. These infrastructure studies cover water, sewer, storm drains, gas and fire hydrants, information technology, security, electrical systems, fire alarm systems, and a facilities assessment update on all Riverside Community College District buildings.

In June, 2006 the Board approved agreements for the assessment of all utility systems in the District with the exception of the electrical and fire alarm systems. Staff has completed the process for the selection of an engineering consultant to complete the electrical and fire alarm systems assessment.

Staff proposes that the District enter into an agreement with P2S Engineering to conduct a survey of the electrical and fire alarm systems at the Moreno Valley, Norco and Riverside Campuses. The contract term would be from November 22, 2006, to the estimated project completion date of June 30, 2007, with the provision that this date may be extended at the discretion of the Vice Chancellor, Administration and Finance or his designee without a formal amendment to this agreement. Payment in consideration of this agreement would not exceed $111,700.00 including reimbursable expenses. Agreement attached.

Funding Source: Measure “C”

Recommended Action: It is recommended that the Board of Trustees approve the attached agreement with P2S Engineering to survey and assess the existing electrical and fire alarm systems at the Moreno Valley, Norco and Riverside Campuses, and the use of Measure C as the funding source and authorize the Vice Chancellor, Administration and Finance to sign the agreement.

Subject: Early Childhood Education Centers Upgrades and Retrofit, Moreno Valley and Norco Campuses

Background: In 2005, the District completed the construction of new Early Childhood Education Centers at the Moreno Valley Campus and the Norco Campus. These facilities were funded through the State Capital Outlay Program. They were designed and constructed right at the time that construction costs were escalating out of control. Because of cost escalations, a number of originally designed program elements in the buildings were eliminated to keep the projects within the State approved construction budget.

Campus staff members have evaluated those elements that were eliminated and have developed a list of items that will bring the facilities up to the quality program standards originally designed for the buildings:

These include:

Moreno Valley:

- Drainage of the Playground Area: $36,273
- Tile Floors in Bathrooms: $9,216
- Observation Window Sound System: $24,728
- Acoustical Panel (Sound Attenuation): $42,650
- Outside Tables and Benches: $3,427
- Shade Structure: $37,623
- Remote Video from Child Classroom to Adult Classroom: $12,327
- Security System: $23,453
- View Window from Office to Front Desk: $1,345
- Cabinetry: $31,254
- Tests and Inspections, Project Management, Contingency: $30,000

Total: $252,296

Norco:

- Tile Floors in Bathrooms: $9,216
- Observation Window Sound System: $24,728
- Acoustical Panel (Sound Attenuation): $42,650

The upgrade and retrofit projects have been evaluated and approved by the Campus’ Strategic Planning Committees and the District Strategic Planning Committee. The proposed funding source is Measure C.

Recommended Action: It is recommended that the Board of Trustees: 1) approve projects to upgrade and retrofit the Early Childhood Education Centers at the Moreno Valley and Norco campuses, 2) authorize the use of Measure “C” for the projects in the following amounts: Moreno Valley, $252,296 and Norco, $373,031 and 3) authorize the Vice Chancellor, Administration and Finance to sign related agreements.

Subject: Food Services Remodels: Riverside Campus and Moreno Valley Campus and Planning, Design, and Construction of Student Support Center: Norco Campus

Background: In November 2004, formal discussions began about the need to upgrade food preparation, kitchen facilities, and serving facilities at the District three campuses. Provider Food Company, which designed the food service facilities and provides food services for California Baptist University and the Grove Church Restaurant, prepared preliminary designs for the remodel and renovation of the food preparation, service lines, and seating areas for the three campus food services areas. The designs include redesign and upgrades of kitchen equipment and furnishings. The District engaged Higginson + Cartozian Architects (HCA) to develop initial cost estimates based on the work done by Provider

Early in the process of looking at the potential of expanding food services in its existing facility the Norco campus decided to shelve plans for remodel or expansion of its existing facility and instead developed a recommendation through the campus strategic planning committee process to request approval for the planning, design, and construction of a new Student Support Center.

Based on an evaluation of the designs developed by Provider Food Company by Higginson + Cartozian Architects and District staff, the following project cost estimates have been compiled for the remodel of the Riverside campus and Moreno Valley campus food service facilities and the planning, design, and construction of a Student Support Center at the Norco campus:

This project would provide an upgrade in the kitchen equipment ($325,000), an expansion of the food service area and an expansion of the seating capacity from 30 seats to 90 seats. Plans for development of a new Student Academic Services facility project are included in the State capital outlay program, with funding hopefully available in 2009-2010.

Arch and Other Fees $ 85,268

This project would provide an upgrade in the kitchen equipment ($221,967) and expansion of the food preparation area.

Norco Campus

The current facility was designed and constructed with the campus Phase I construction in 1991 when student headcount enrollment was 1,200. Current headcount enrollment exceeds 8,100 students. Initially a plan to expand the capacity of the current cafeteria was evaluated. This concept was rejected when it became apparent that the configuration of the existing physical structure did not provide enough space for expansion.

Preliminary program planning for the Student Support Center has identified the need for a two story structure that would have approximately 15,000 assignable square feet (asf) and 22,000 gross square feet (gsf). The project has not been formally programmed, but the Campus has provided desired program space that includes:

1st floor: a cafeteria, tiger’s den (vending machines and sitting area), staff dining room, restrooms for students and staff.

2nd floor: a student government office, student activities coordinator office, several small meeting rooms, a faculty innovation center, medium sized meeting rooms and a large meeting room (hopefully, to accommodate the Board of Trustees meetings that occur once per semester in fall and spring), an open “commons” area for students that can be used as a lounge with computer workstations and restrooms.

Subject: Amendment for Additional Services of Quadrangle Modernization Project

Background: On August 8, 2002, the Board of Trustees approved the hiring of The Steinberg Group for architectural services for the Riverside City Campus Quadrangle Modernization Project. Staff is requesting to amend the original agreement with The Steinberg Group for additional services to redesign the Quad irrigation system and Quad landscape.

It was originally planned to keep in place the existing irrigation system and to maintain the existing landscape. During construction, it was discovered that the irrigation system could not remain functional because of its age and the way it was originally designed. Without the ability to irrigate the landscape, most of the lawn, plants and vegetation around the Quad have been destroyed or severely impacted. The Steinberg Group will provide design services to:

- Design the replacement and repair of the interior and exterior landscape of the Quad Project.
- Provide a redesign and working drawings for replacement of the irrigation system.

Based on the work to be completed by The Steinberg Group staff will bring forward a recommendation for funding the additional irrigation installation and landscaped repair and replacement.

Additional services would be at a fixed fee of $23,000 dollars, including reimbursable expenses.

It is recommended that Measure “C” funds be used to fund the additional design services, as State-funded modernization projects do not cover such expenditures.

Recommended Action: It is recommended that the Board of Trustees approve the amendment to the agreement with The Steinberg Group in an amount not to exceed $23,000, authorize the use of Measure “C” funds, and authorize the Vice Chancellor, Administration and Finance to sign the amendment.
