Reference:

No references

As a part of the instruction of our career and technical programs, it is desirable to afford an opportunity for students to do work of the type typically encountered in job situations in the business community. These services are provided to the public on a cost and materials basis subject to the necessary fiscal and instructional restrictions which ensure adequate accounting and instructional integrity.

The District will perform these services only to enhance the educational training of students. The work accepted and all necessary tests will be executed by students at the risk of those receiving the service. The District, District staff, or students accept no financial or legal responsibility for work improperly executed or for any damage resulting from the service received.

Individuals receiving services from District instructional programs will be expected to pay costs and materials for the services received consistent with reasonable fiscal procedures as developed by the Office of Administration and Finance. These will be explained to each individual receiving service prior to the time the service is rendered.

Administration will develop procedures, announcements and other terms and conditions in keeping with the intent of this policy.
